The capital of the easternmost province of Piedmont, 101 kilometers from Turin and 50 from Milan, served by important infrastructures such as Malpensa airport, the motorway network and high-speed trains. An easily accessible land, where you can breathe a particular atmosphere characterized by Piedmontese rigor and Milanese liveliness. A city on a human scale, where traditions and history meet in a historic center that resembles a nineteenth-century living room, dominated by the soaring dome of San Gaudenzio, a masterpiece by Alessandro Antonelli. A city squeezed between a strip of land and rice fields between the Sesia and Ticino. Here, in the glare of the sun which in summer seems to make noise, it is so intense; in a dimension that in autumn and winter is full of suggestions, the Novara plain extends dotted with rice fields and ancient farmhouses framed by poplar groves swaying in the breeze. Behind the curve of the wine hills and castles and further up the suggestive silence of Lake Orta and the luminous reflections of Lake Maggiore. The horizon is closed by the Alps with the perennial glaciers of Monte Rosa.
